

Chapter 1: Amira Finds a Toy

Once upon a time, in a small neighborhood, there lived a kind-hearted girl named Amira. She loved playing in the park with her friends.

One sunny afternoon, Amira found a beautiful toy car on the playground. It was shiny and red, just like the one she had always wanted!

"Maybe I can keep it," she thought. But then she remembered what her mother taught her: "Honesty is a beautiful gift from Allah."

Amira decided to take the toy to the teacher to find its owner. Even though it was hard, she knew it was the right thing to do.

That evening, a little boy named Omar came to thank Amira. "You found my toy! Jazakallah khair!" he said with a big smile.

Amira felt so happy inside. Being honest made her feel much better than keeping something that wasn't hers. She had done the right thing, and Allah was pleased.

Chapter 2: The Broken Window

A few days later, Amira was playing ball with her brother Ahmed in their backyard. Ahmed kicked the ball really hard, and... CRASH! The ball broke their neighbor's window!

"Oh no!" said Ahmed. "What should we do?"

Amira was scared, but she remembered the Hadith: "Honesty leads to Paradise." She took a deep breath and said, "We have to tell Uncle Mahmoud the truth."

Together, they walked to their neighbor's house. Amira's hands were shaking, but she knocked on the door anyway.

"Uncle Mahmoud, we broke your window by accident. We are so sorry," said Amira bravely.

Uncle Mahmoud smiled kindly. "Thank you for being honest, dear children. Accidents happen, but telling the truth shows good character. Your parents raised you well."

Later, Amira and Ahmed helped clean up the broken glass. Amira learned that even when something is scary, being honest brings peace to the heart.

Chapter 3: The Test at School

At school, Amira had a big spelling test. She had studied hard, but there was one word she couldn't remember.

Her friend Sara, who sat next to her, had already finished. Amira could easily peek at Sara's paper, but she remembered what Prophet Muhammad ﷺ taught: "The truthful and honest merchant is with the prophets and the righteous."

"Cheating is like lying," Amira thought. "I want to be truthful."

She tried her best and wrote what she remembered. When the teacher returned the tests, Amira got one question wrong. Sara got a perfect score.

But Amira didn't feel bad. She had done her best with honesty, and that was more important than a perfect score.

Her teacher, Miss Layla, said, "Class, remember: Success with honesty is true success. Even if we make mistakes, being truthful and honest makes us better Muslims."

That night, Amira said her prayers with a happy heart. She knew that Allah loves those who are honest, even when it's hard.

And from that day on, Amira always chose honesty, no matter what.
